Q: HttpFactory with PHP SimpleHttpServer - how to catch echo errors? I am working with HttpFactory in PHP. I start a SimpleHttpServer like this: error_template = 'file:///dirname(__FILE__)/error-404.html'; $simpleHttpServer->start(); ?> Then I send a GET request to The web page is running fine but if foo/bar does not exist a 404 error occurs. I want to catch this error, so that the user receives a 500 error page, instead of a regular 404. My problem is, the PHP SimpleHttpServer only catches the headers, I cannot catch the whole echo or die() happening. How can I catch this error? A: The reason why you can't catch it, is that you use a client script and not a server script. What you need to do, is catch the signal by your own server script, or if you want a 100% PHP solution, use the PHP SimpleHttpServer and catch the errors by your own script. Q: How to make a picture change when scrolling up and down using Javascript and JQuery? I want to make a function/script that changes the picture when scrolling up and down. I think I might need to use JQuery and Javascript to do this. Please help, thanks in advance! A: Since this question has no code (yet) I'll provide you with the bare-bones necessary to get this up and running. You'll need to decide your functional flow of your page, and you'll have to hook into two events, 'onscroll', and 'onscrollend'. As you're looking for a flippin' browser native object, the easiest method is to use an IMG that is a background. Put
