PrivacyQ: Why are we unable to run PDF.js on IE11 I just noticed that when I run my website on IE11 only PDF.js is not working (note: This is something that I did not know until I encountered it, I have not tested it on other browsers) I have tested it on IE10, Chrome, Firefox, and Edge and it works fine for all of them. However, when I test it on IE11, it just shows the script and I'm unable to click on the PDF viewer. What is the reason for this? I've also found a similar question but the answer does not make sense to me: Why does PDF.js not work in IE 11? A: According to you can't rely on PDF.js to be installed globally. If you add the path in your web.config: The installation will be done automatically when you open your project. A: What is the reason for this? Internet Explorer supports 64-bit plugins but only if the page is served over HTTPS. This is to stop bots from modifying pages and stealing information. This is the reason why your website does not work if you attempt to load it over HTTP. You have two choices: Let people use Chrome/Firefox/Edge/whatever (they'll almost certainly have a supported browser) Switch the site over to HTTPS. You can do the first option by adding the following to your web.config. Or you can just let people use IE. Skills gap is wider in Birmingham schools Birmingham's
