The person I'm referring to usually walks with a sling on his shoulder, but he wasn't feeling well on the day of our interview. If so, then what is it supposed to be? A: If we draw out the structure of your sentence: The person I'm referring to usually walks with a sling on his shoulder. Here, you can just leave the second to last word: The person I'm referring to usually walks with a sling on his shoulder. The part that usually is a question is: The person I'm referring to You can leave off "that" (the subject of the clause) in order to answer the 1cb139a0ed
