The Stamford Bridge boss felt Terry and Cole deserved to be dismissed after they clashed with Villa's Christian Benteke and his team-mate Fabian Delph following an aerial ball in the first half. Chelsea were up against it in the first half without John Terry and Ashley Cole (Getty) Terry later missed a late penalty but Mourinho sent on striker Diego Costa after the break as he looked to pressure his players into finding the net. In an interview with Sky Sports after the game Mourinho said he didn't fear the red cards because he is never scared of being told off by ref Lee Mason. "I think they (the red cards) are not a bad thing for the players because they are natural reactions," Mourinho said. "They are natural reactions of these players, they are not God. They have a responsibility but they are normal players and in this moment, in this very moment, they made mistakes. "They are human mistakes. If you make a mistake in this moment in your life and you never did that again in your life, you are a human being. In this moment you make the mistake. "We are not perfect human beings. We have all done something that we would never do again. We have all said something that we would never say again. The red cards are human mistakes. You are human beings. "People want you to feel guilty, they want you to feel bad. That is not my nature. I am a human being. I am not God. I am not perfect. I am not Superman. I am not a robot. I am not a robot.
