Version 1.5, 2014:.Q: How to use foreign keys to efficiently reference many child records from same parent record This is a question out of curiosity because I haven't used the Ecto framework for Elixir. I have a situation where a user can update any record of a has_many association: many users can be in one team. I would like to have an admin section that lists the teams to a user. As such, each team would have its own child record linked to the user via a belongs_to association. However, that child record should reference many records via a has_many association. These referenced records should be those of other teams that the user belongs to. The has_many association should be scoped to teams with an :owner_id of the current user. How can I do this without having to do a loop through each child record in that :owner_id? A: A little late, but my suggestion is to use the Ecto.assoc_constraint to build your query and just go through the results yourself. Ecto 1.2.3 should have some support for this. Just provide the owner_id to the query and the constraint will restrict only the ones that are owned by the user that started the query and this is basically what your goal is.
