Rhabdomyosarcoma of soft parts is a very rare, highly aggressive childhood tumour. It usually arises in the lower extremity and presents as a slow-growing, deep-seated mass. The disease may recur even in patients with small, apparently localized tumours. In this report, we describe a 2-year-old male child who presented with an ulcerated, pedunculated skin mass, located in the right thigh. A biopsy revealed the tumour to be rhabdomyosarcoma, which was confirmed after complete excision. Immunohistochemical analysis demonstrated positive nuclear staining for vimentin and myoglobin, and staining for alpha-smooth muscle actin and desmin was negative. This report presents the first clinical case of recurrent rhabdomyosarcoma of soft parts in a 2-year-old child, and presents a brief review of the literature. ACLU Launches Worldwide War on Surveillance The American Civil Liberties Union is in the midst of a wide-ranging campaign aimed at raising awareness about a class of surveillance programs the group says is growing and may have a chilling effect on free speech. And it's not your typical civil liberties group — unless you're thinking of the ACLU. As the ACLU sees it, it has a mission to defend civil liberties. And to do that, its activists have to keep the public informed about threats to those liberties. "We believe one of our jobs is to keep people aware so that they can take action," says Kate 6d1f23a050
